

FORT SMITH & WESTERN MUST BUILD DEPOT AT CLEARVIEW

In the case of G. B Doggett, of Clearview, Okla., vs. Fort Smith and Western Railway in which Doggett and other citizens filed complaint before the corporation Commission asking that the Ft Smith and Western railroad construct and maintain a depot on the line of the defendant in the town of Clearview, Okla, the case was first set for hearing the 12 of February when parties to the same appeared and having under consideration negotiations of settlement, the case was passed until February 13th, when an agreement between the complainants and the defendant was filed with the Commission. Said agreement in effect was that the complainants were to secure at once a deed conveying to the railroad company additional depot and station grounds a part of which is described in the deed made by James E. Thompson to said railroad company, dated October 19, 1908, which deed is lapsed by failure of conditions therein stated.

The railroad agrees to construct and maintain a depot building or station as soon after said property is acquired as can be reasonably done and within sixty days thereafter.

The basis of agreement appearing to be satisfactory to all parties concerned the Commission has issued order that defendant Ft. Smith and Western Railroad company comply with obligations within sixty days from date upon which deed or conveyance to additional grounds is delivered to said defendants or any agent thereof.
